READ THE PASSAGE FIRST

The Storm Survivor

After the storm passed, twelve-year-old Marcus descended from the attic where he had taken shelter. Outside, debris from broken fences and fallen trees covered the street. The damage was everywhere.

Food had become scarce -- the grocery stores were closed, and many neighbors had left. But Marcus had resolved to stay and help those who couldn't leave.

The cleanup was treacherous work. Nails and sharp metal hid under the mud. But Marcus was relentless, working hour after hour without stopping.

By evening, he had cleared a path to his elderly neighbor's door. Sometimes one determined person makes all the difference.
